Project Updates

Runyankore - Uganda

The NT translation is going through one final spell check. We are working toward printing within the next six months. In the last few weeks, the Lord has supplied more than $40,000 toward this printing project. Praise the Lord! If you would like to contribute, please memo your gift: Runyankore.

Madi - Uganda

WorldView Associate Sam Moss and his family have returned to the field after a short furlough. Our national translation team will all be moved into place in the city of Arua by December and we will officially launch the project in March of 2016.

Liangmai - NE India

WorldView Associates Wangrai & Michele Ngonamai are on a furlough during which they have had several meetings to raise support for the project. They return to India in early November to resume work with the translation team.

Tibetan - Nepal

WorldView Associate Justin Levine and his wife Cheryl welcome their fourth child, a baby girl named Jasmine Dawa. They will return to Nepal at the end of October, then Justin will immediately leave to teach a three-week class at WorldView Institute of India. Please pray for this family and pray for some potential new technological developments that could greatly enhance all our translation projects.

Asang Khongso - Myanmar

WorldView Associate Rama Thang and his team have completed the rough draft about halfway through the Gospel of Matthew.

Sarikoli-Tajik

WorldView Associate Tim Cleghorn and his family have moved to the field. They have been living in a hotel while awaiting student visas and permission to move into an apartment. Please pray for them during this transitional time.

WorldView Institute of India

We have five brand new students this year. James Overton is home from India after eight weeks of teaching. He and his family are still working toward raising their personal support and will return to India at the end of December.
